Hicham — it's yours.

"Salt in a Swing," the performance film, is sitting at the top of your workbench — play it with sound. The man you chose sings the whole song to camera from the weathered swing, the grey-green sea behind him, the rusted chains and the evening light. Same world as the sleeve, same record underneath — so the film, the cover and the song all live in one place now. It's his porch.

He's lip-synced to the record we already made, not a new vocal, and it sits right on it the whole way through — I watched it end to end and it reads as one continuous performance, no seams that break the spell.

The song, its cover and the lyric sheet are all still right there with it, exactly as you accepted them.

One honest note to carry: the performer is a studio-made figure, not a real named person, performing the record you own. If you ever post or share the film somewhere public, give it whatever synthetic-media tag the platform asks for — that's standard for any film made this way, and nothing to worry about for private viewing.

Sit with it. If you want a tighter cut, a longer hold on one stretch, or a warmer grade, name it and we'll take another pass.

What is in the kit

1 Salt in a Swing

Audio • MP3 • salt-in-a-swing.mp3

The finished track — play this first.

2 Salt in a Swing — cover

Image • PNG • salt-in-a-swing-cover.png

The sleeve for the record, drawn straight from the song. Square, ready for streaming art or a printed cover.

3 Salt in a Swing — the performance film (open this first)

Film • MP4 • salt-in-a-swing-performance.mp4

Play this with sound. The whole song performed to camera from the swing — the same world as the record and the sleeve.
