

Start here

Open this first: Jazz Night poster — print (window & counter).

It's yours, Hicham — both pieces are on the workbench. Open the print poster first: The Blue Hour runs as the marquee, the horn sitting in that warm pool of light exactly the way you described the room, with the Friday kickoff carrying its weight and Free kept quiet at the door. The square sits right beside it, built square from the ground up for the feed rather than cropped down from the poster — same low-lit world, recomposed. No act name, no handle, nothing shouted: the night is the headline, which is the grown-up version of this. Print the portrait for the window and the counter, post the square to Instagram. If a line wants more weight or the light wants to shift, name it and it moves.

What is in the kit

- Jazz Night poster — print (window & counter) (open this first) poster/jazz-night-poster-print.pdf
The print version, portrait. Pressed to PDF — print it for the window, the bar counter, or hand it to a print shop as-is.
- Jazz Night poster — square (Instagram) square/jazz-night-square-3.png
The square version for the feed — the same world recomposed, not a crop. Post it straight to Instagram.